Social Development Stephen Bell, Peter Aggleton, 2016-02-01 New approaches are needed to monitor and evaluate health and social development Existing strategies tend to require expensive time consuming analytical procedures The growing emphasis on results based programming has resulted in evaluation being conducted in order to demonstrate accountability and success rather than how change takes place what works and why The tendency to monitor and evaluate using log frames and their variants closes policy makers and practitioners eyes to the sometimes unanticipated means by which change takes place Two recent developments hold the potential to transcend these difficulties and to lead to important changes in the way in which the effects of health and social development programming are understood First there is growing interest in ways of monitoring programmes and assessing impact that are more grounded in the realities of practice than many of the results based methods currently utilised Second there are calls for the greater use of interpretive and ethnographic methods in programme design monitoring and evaluation Responding to these concerns this book illustrates the potential of interpretative methods to aid understanding and make a difference in real people s lives Through a focus on individual and community perspectives and locally grounded explanations the methods explored in this book offer a potentially richer way of assessing the relationships between intent action and change in health and social development in Africa Asia Europe and the Americas

Meeting, 2010 This book presents the proceedings of the First International Conference on Biologically Inspired Cognitive Architectures BICA 2010 which is also the First Annual Meeting of the BICA Society A cognitive architecture is a computational framework for the design of intelligent even conscious agents It may draw inspiration from many sources such as pure mathematics physics or abstract theories of cognition A biologically inspired cognitive architecture BICA is one which incorporates formal mechanisms from computational models of human and animal cognition which currently provide the only physical examples with the robustness flexibility scalability and consciousness that artificial intelligence aspires to achieve The BICA approach has several different goals the broad aim of creating intelligent software systems without focusing on any one area of application attempting to accurately simulate human behavior or gain an understanding of how the human mind works either for purely scientific reasons or for applications in a variety of domains understanding how the brain works at a neuronal and sub neuronal level or designing artificial systems which can perform the cognitive tasks important to practical applications in human society and which at present only humans are capable of The papers presented in this volume reflect the cross disciplinary and integrative nature of the BICA approach and will be of interest to anyone developing their own approach to cognitive architectures Many insights can be found here for inspiration or to import into one's own architecture
