The Difference in Tom Regan's and Peter Singer's Position on Animal Rights Mbogo Wa Wambui, 2016-05-18

Essay from the year 2013 in the subject Philosophy Philosophy of the 20th century grade 0 7 University of Nairobi course Environmental Ethics language English abstract This paper discusses and contrasts the positions for and against the use of animals for the advancement of science Moreover the paper questions how right the use of animals is and whether we should be bothered by their sentience The issue of animal rights begins with the question of what sort of beings are deserving of moral regard Do we only treat human beings or include animals as well It also begs the question how are we supposed to treat animals Do they have moral rights When animals suffer can we equate it to human suffering Should we ban both experimentation on animals and large scale commercial farming of animal What is the moral status of animals Do we have a moral obligation to become vegetarians instead of eating animals Peter Singer in 1975 wrote a book Animal Liberation which launched the animal rights movement It was and is a call for an end to human tyranny towards animals It was a call to end the pain and suffering of animals In fact Peter Singer likened the tyranny on animals with that of white humans over black humans Peter Singer position today is classified as utilization following on Jeremy Bentham's agreement for sentience as the bar we should use to measure morality as opposed to reason The argument runs as follows Since all sentient beings have the ability to suffer it follows that they have interests And since they have interests when these are frustrated it leads to suffering

Being a utilitarian Singer's position is one that seeks to maximize satisfaction of interests whether they are of humans or animals. What about Tom Regan's position? Tom Regan, on the other hand, adopts a deontological rights position which is the view that animals like men are ends in themselves and therefore ought not to be exploited. Animals and humans have equal rights. In fact, to Regan, animals have similar essential properties like humans with regards to desires, memories, and intelligence, and so on, and this therefore gives them equal intrinsic value like humans. Regan is more radical than Singer. Why? He calls for the total end to commercial animal farming, all hunting and trapping of animals, all animal experimentation, even eating of animals. This article discusses and contrasts the positions taken by these eminent scholars.

Animal Rights Without Liberation Alasdair Cochrane, 2012. Alasdair Cochrane introduces an entirely new theory of animal rights grounded in their interests as sentient beings. He then applies this theory to different and underexplored policy areas such as genetic engineering, pet keeping, indigenous hunting, and religious slaughter. In contrast to other proponents of animal rights, Cochrane claims that because most sentient animals are not autonomous agents, they have no intrinsic interest in liberty. As such, he argues that our obligations to animals lie in ending practices that cause their suffering and death and do not require the liberation of animals. Cochrane's interest-based rights approach weighs the interests of animals to determine which is sufficient to impose strict duties on humans. In so doing, Cochrane acknowledges that sentient animals have a clear and discernable right not to be made to suffer and not to be killed, but he argues that they do not have a prima facie right to liberty. Because most animals possess no interest in leading freely chosen lives, humans have no moral obligation to liberate them. Moving beyond theory to the practical aspects of applied ethics, this pragmatic volume provides much needed perspective on the realities and responsibilities of the human-animal relationship.
