Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program on the muscle strength and body composition of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program was designed to be performed in a home setting and consisted of three sessions per week. The program was divided into three phases: Phase 1 (Weeks 1-4) focused on building a foundation of strength and endurance; Phase 2 (Weeks 5-8) focused on increasing the intensity of the training; and Phase 3 (Weeks 9-12) focused on maintaining the gains and improving the overall fitness. The results showed that the program was effective in increasing muscle strength and body composition. The participants showed significant improvements in muscle strength, as measured by the 1RM test, and body composition, as measured by the DEXA scan. The program was also well-tolerated, with no significant changes in heart rate or blood pressure. The findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program can be an effective way to improve muscle strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
