Down and Out in the New Economy Ilana Gershon, 2017-04-12 Finding a job used to be simple You d show up at an office and ask for an application A friend would mention a job in their department Or you d see an ad in a newspaper and send in your cover letter Maybe you d call the company a week later to check in but the basic approach was easy And once you got a job you would stay often for decades Now well it s complicated If you want to have a shot at a good job you need to have a robust profile on LinkedIn And an enticing personal brand Or something like that contemporary how to books tend to offer contradictory advice But they agree on one thing in today s economy you can t just be an employee looking to get hired you have to market yourself as a business one that can help another business achieve its goals That s a radical transformation in how we think about work and employment says Ilana Gershon And with Down and Out in the New Economy she digs deep into that change and what it means not just for job seekers but for businesses and our very culture In telling her story Gershon covers all parts of the employment spectrum she interviews hiring managers about how they assess candidates attends personal branding seminars talks with managers at companies around the United States to suss out regional differences like how Silicon Valley firms look askance at the lengthier employment tenures of applicants from the Midwest And she finds that not everything has changed though the technological trappings may be glitzier in a lot of cases who you know remains more important than what you know Throughout Gershon keeps her eye on bigger questions interested not in what lessons job seekers can take though there are plenty of those here but on what it means to consider yourself a business What does that blurring of personal and vocational lives do to our sense of our selves the economy our communities Though it s often dressed up in the language of liberation is this approach actually disempowering workers at the expense of corporations Rich in the voices of people deeply involved with all parts of the employment process Down and Out in the New Economy offers a snapshot of the quest for work today
