Security and Usability Lorrie Faith Cranor, Simson Garfinkel, 2005-08-25 Human factors and usability issues have traditionally played a limited role in security research and secure systems development Security experts have largely ignored usability issues both because they often failed to recognize the importance of human factors and because they lacked the expertise to address them But there is a growing recognition that today's security problems can be solved only by addressing issues of usability and human factors Increasingly well publicized security breaches are attributed to human errors that might have been prevented through more usable software Indeed the world's future cyber security depends upon the deployment of security technology that can be broadly used by untrained computer users Still many people believe there is an inherent tradeoff between computer security and usability It's true that a computer without passwords is usable but not very secure A computer that makes you authenticate every five minutes with a password and a fresh drop of blood might be very secure but nobody would use it Clearly people need computers and if they can't use one that's secure they'll use one that isn't Unfortunately unsecured systems aren't usable for long either They get hacked compromised and otherwise rendered useless There is increasing agreement that we need to design secure systems that people can actually use but less agreement about how to reach this goal Security Usability is the first book length work describing the current state of the art in this emerging field Edited by security experts Dr Lorrie Faith Cranor and Dr Simson Garfinkel and authored by cutting edge security and human computer interaction HCI researchers world wide this volume is expected to become both a classic reference and an inspiration for future research Security Usability groups 34 essays into six parts Realigning Usability and Security with careful attention to user centered design principles security and usability can be synergistic Authentication
