
These findings indicate the use of generic, qualitative, quantitative, and integrative research methods is not good practice, with some evidence of bias in favour of qualitative research, and suggests that the existing research on the topic is flawed. It is concluded that there is a need for a new approach to research synthesis in the health care research area.

Abstract

These authors proposed a group of four variables: cognitive-motivational, social, emotional, and physical. They suggested that the four variables could be used to design a program to help children with emotional and behavioral problems. The program would be designed to help children with emotional and behavioral problems to develop a positive self-image, to develop a positive attitude towards school, to develop a positive attitude towards peers, and to develop a positive attitude towards adults.
