

The Digestive System

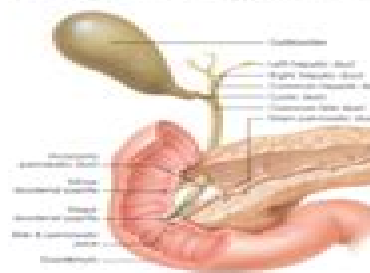

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

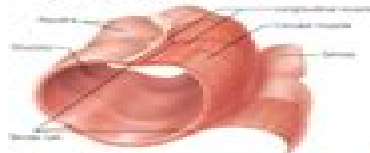

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile secreted by the liver and releases it into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

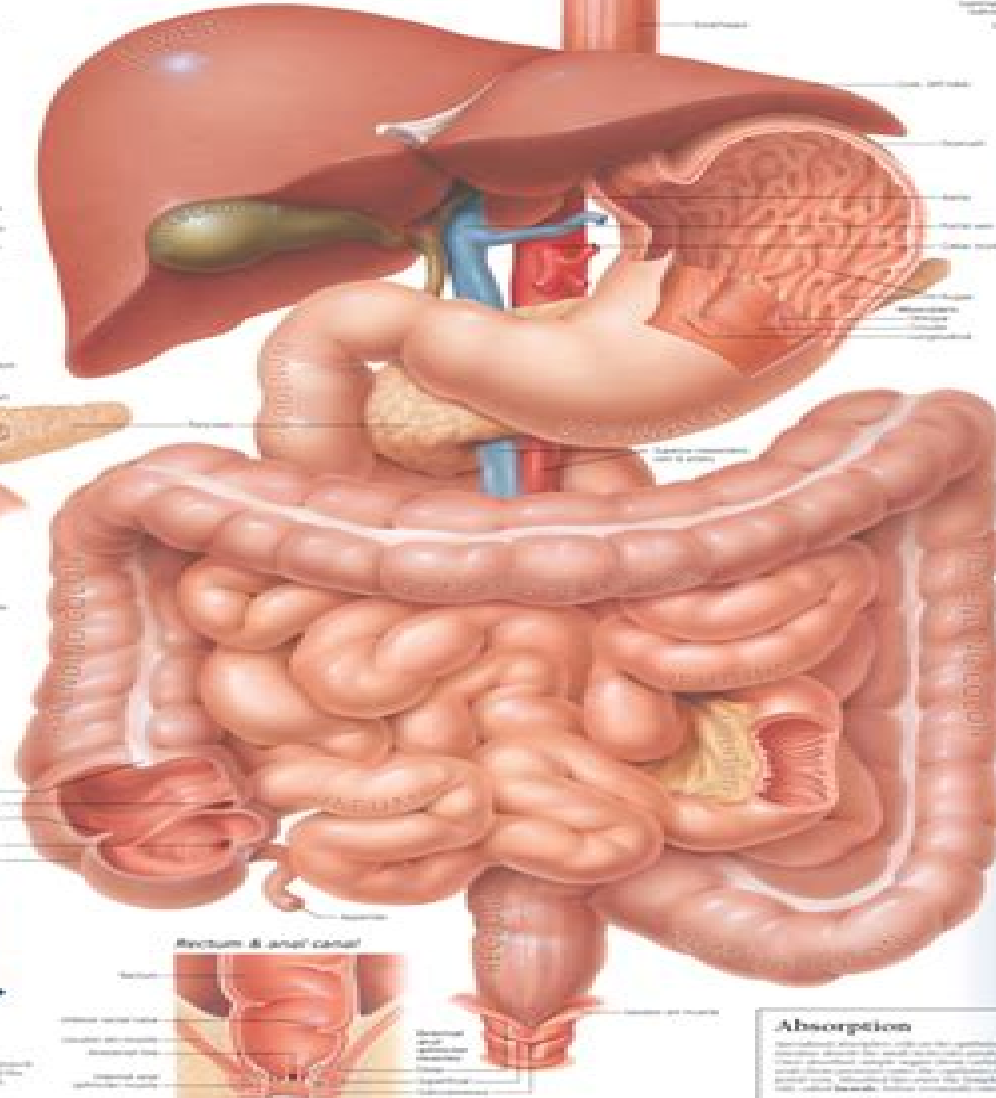

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter, thereby forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

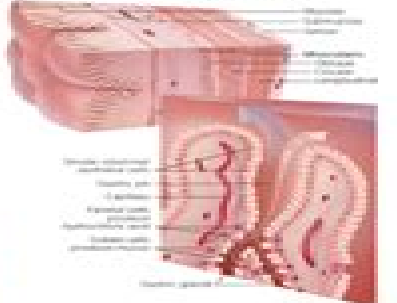

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Salivary glands secrete saliva, which is mixed with the food in the mouth. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands. Saliva contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the chemical digestion of carbohydrates.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the chemical digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. It is responsible for the chemical digestion of food and the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly coiled and has a large surface area for absorption.

Intestinal lining

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream and the lymphatic system.
