I entered the clinical field of psychology in 1969. Five decades later, I remain fascinated by human development and the impact of our experiences. This manual is published in 1968 by the American Psychiatric Association. APA is founded in 1844. We have learned a significant amount about clinical syndromes using a biopsychosocial (cultural) paradigm. Here, I offer my clinical observations.

These manuals are updated about every 10 years or so. They outline syndromes and relevant symptom clusters specific to each disorder. These manuals are meant to be used around the world. Newer versions are much more culturally competent than this one. It takes into account co-morbidity which to this day is a very common clinical presentation.

Non-Psychotic OBS

Schizophrenia

Subtypes include: simple, hebephrenic, catatonic (excited), catatonia (withdrawn), paranoid, latent and residual, excited and depressed. They also include childhood onset.
