

The Digestive System

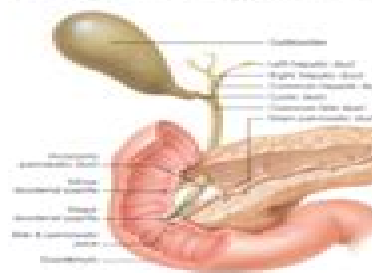

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

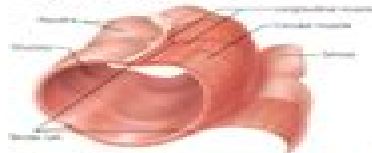

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

Just below the stomach, organs known as the accessories of the digestive system, which are connected to the stomach by the digestive accessory ducts, assist in the process. The liver is a large organ on the right side of the abdomen that produces bile, a substance that helps in the digestion of fats. The pancreas is a small organ located behind the stomach that produces pancreatic juice, which contains enzymes that help in the digestion of food.

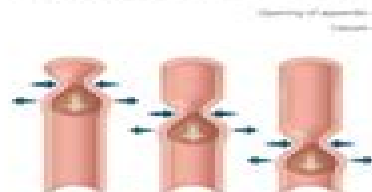

Layers of large intestine

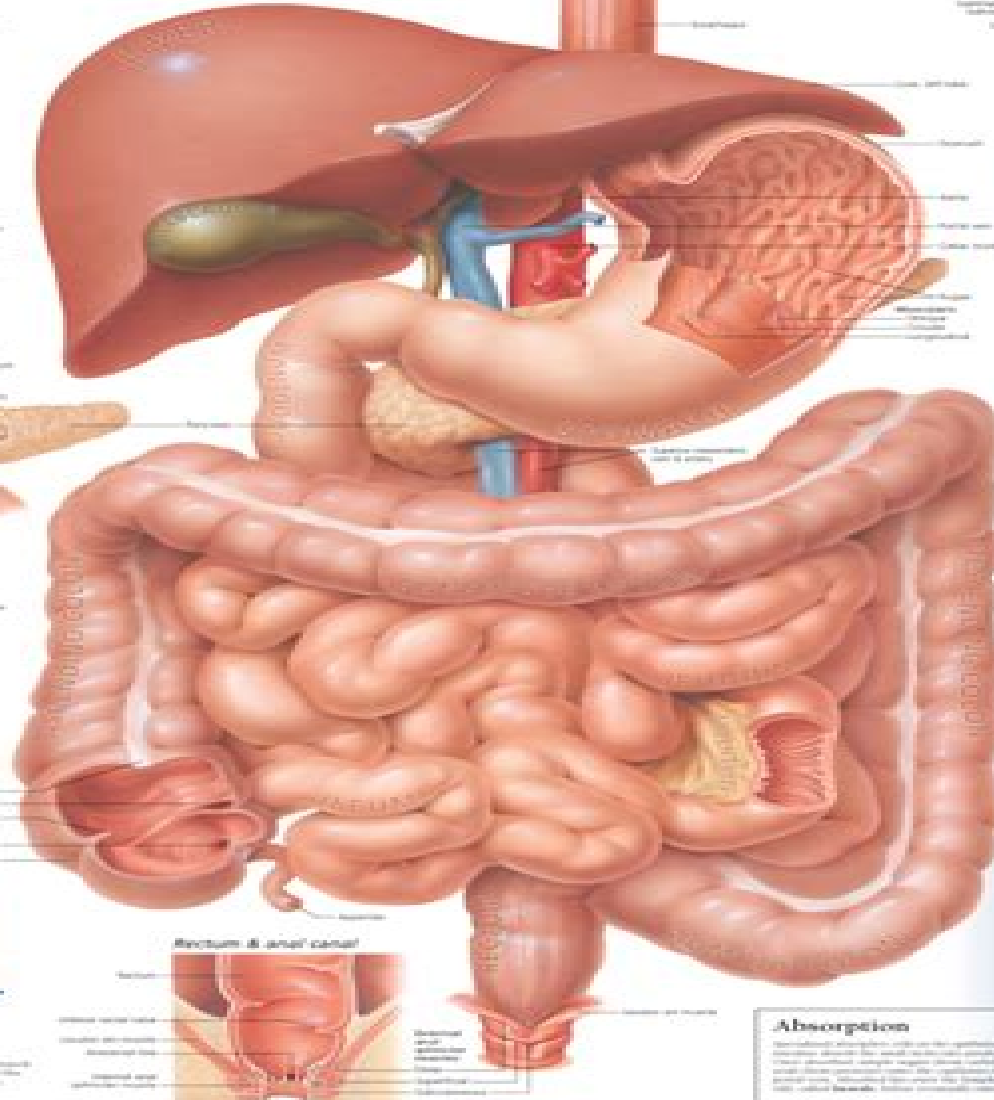

Large intestine

The large intestine, or colon, is the final part of the digestive system. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine is divided into the ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, and sigmoid colon.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful, rhythmic contractions called peristalsis. These contractions are initiated by the swallowing reflex and the defecation reflex, which are controlled by the brain.

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. It begins in the mouth, where food is broken down into small pieces by the teeth. The salivary glands, which are located in the mouth, produce saliva, a fluid that helps in the digestion of food. The parotid gland is the largest of the salivary glands and is located in the neck. The sublingual gland is located under the tongue, and the submandibular gland is located under the jaw.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper abdomen, just below the diaphragm. The stomach is divided into the cardiac region, fundus, and pyloric region. The cardiac region is the part of the stomach that is closest to the esophagus, and the pyloric region is the part of the stomach that is closest to the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the lower abdomen, just below the stomach. The small intestine is divided into the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine, and the ileum is the last part of the small intestine.

Absorption

The absorption of nutrients is the process by which the body takes in the nutrients from the food. It occurs in the small intestine, where the nutrients are broken down into small molecules that can be absorbed by the body. The absorption of nutrients is a complex process that involves the transport of nutrients from the small intestine to the rest of the body.
