

THE SKELETON
The skeleton is the framework of the body, supporting the soft organs and tissues. It is composed of bones and cartilage. The bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized tissue called bone. The cartilage is a soft, white, fibrous tissue. The skeleton is divided into the axial skeleton (skull, spine, and rib cage) and the appendicular skeleton (arms and legs). The axial skeleton is made of 28 bones, and the appendicular skeleton is made of 126 bones. The total number of bones in the human body is 206.

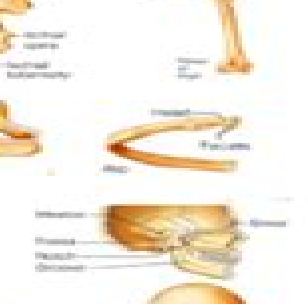

BONES
Bones are made of a hard, white, mineralized tissue called bone. They are composed of organic and inorganic materials. The organic materials are proteins and lipids, and the inorganic materials are calcium and phosphorus. Bones are living tissues that can grow, repair, and remodel themselves. They are also involved in the storage of minerals and the production of blood cells.

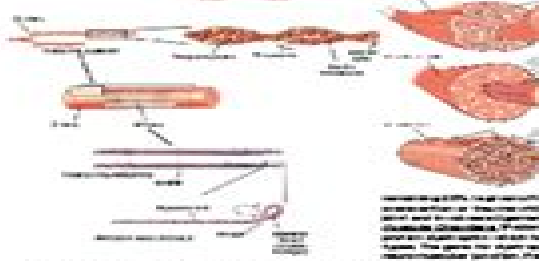

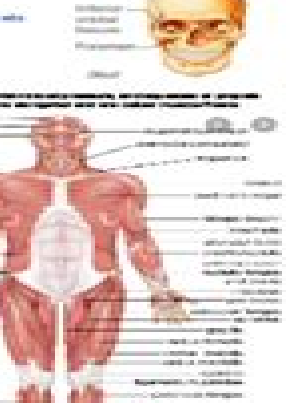

JOINTS
Joints are the points where two or more bones meet. They allow for movement and flexibility of the body. There are three main types of joints: fibrous joints, cartilaginous joints, and synovial joints. Fibrous joints are made of fibrous tissue and are found in the skull and spine. Cartilaginous joints are made of cartilage and are found in the spine and ribs. Synovial joints are made of a synovial cavity and are found in the arms and legs.

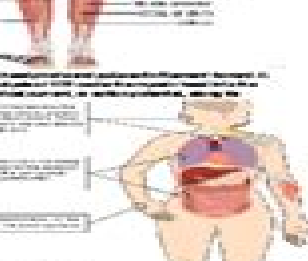

MUSCLES
Muscles are made of muscle tissue, which is composed of muscle fibers. They are responsible for movement and force. There are two main types of muscles: skeletal muscles and smooth muscles. Skeletal muscles are attached to bones and are under voluntary control. Smooth muscles are found in the walls of internal organs and are under involuntary control. Muscles are made of protein and can grow, repair, and remodel themselves.

MUSCLE TISSUE

Exercise helps to strengthen the muscles and bones, and it also helps to reduce the risk of chronic diseases. A balanced diet provides the body with the nutrients it needs to function properly. Adequate sleep is necessary for the body to repair and regenerate itself. A healthy lifestyle can help to improve the quality of life and increase the lifespan.
