Abstract: This research examines the impact of social change on the family unit, specifically focusing on the role of the mother. The study is based on a qualitative approach, using interviews with 15 mothers from diverse backgrounds. The findings suggest that social change has led to a shift in the traditional gender roles, with mothers now taking on more responsibilities in the workplace and the home. This has resulted in increased stress and a need for support. The study also highlights the importance of community and social networks in helping mothers navigate these challenges. The research concludes that social change has a significant impact on the family unit, and that there is a need for further research to explore the long-term effects of these changes.
