

Building Blocks To Space

Rome wasn't built in a day, and neither was America's space program. It took decades of study and exploration to reach the point where astronauts and cosmonauts could live together in space for months at a time as they do now on the International Space Station (ISS). The building blocks to get to this point came in the form of four space campaigns: Mercury, Gemini, Apollo, and Space Shuttle. The whole "space race" concept was underscored in a 1961 speech where president John F. Kennedy declared America's resolve to land a human on the Moon by 1970.

The Mercury project was a series of six manned flights that extended beyond Earth's atmosphere, taking place from 1961 through 1963. Though the goal was to orbit the Earth, the first two flights merely went to suborbital altitudes beyond our atmosphere. While Mercury astronauts learned first-hand of many space travel challenges, the issues were limited by the reduced mobility the astronauts endured. The astronauts were strapped on their backs for the entire flight, which ranged from less than a half hour to just over a full day.

Mercury flights were launched with Titan and Redstone rockets, and the astronauts splashed down in small recovery capsules slowed by parachutes. The process of getting up into space and back down onto Earth was a major undertaking in itself. Because it had never been done before, space vehicles had to be designed to overcome the intense heat that would come as the craft re-entered Earth's atmosphere. A lengthy debate ensued on the benefits of using a large, copper heat shield to diffuse the temperatures, versus ablation—the melting of a protective layer on the capsule—to safeguard the passengers. Ablation won, along with a change in design to create a blunt-ended capsule, which would better dissipate energy and heat.

The 10 manned flights of the Gemini flight program followed Mercury and extended from 1965 through 1966. Gemini built on the successes of Mercury, stressing the goals of subjecting men to long-duration flights, and docking with other orbiting objects. The longest Gemini flight lasted 10 days, and after several attempts, Gemini was able to dock and separate from Agena, an unmanned satellite. Astronauts participated in several extra vehicular activities (EVAs).
