Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the performance of a simulated occupational performance task. The study was conducted with 10 participants who were assigned to either a control group or an experimental group. The experimental group received a 12-week training program that focused on improving their performance on the task. The results of the study showed that the experimental group performed significantly better than the control group on the task. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can be effective in improving performance on a simulated occupational performance task.
