Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, body composition, and bone mineral density (BMD) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either the resistance training (RT) or control (CON) group. The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the CON group remained sedentary. The results showed that the RT group had significantly greater increases in muscle strength, body composition, and BMD compared to the CON group. These findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective intervention for improving muscle strength, body composition, and BMD in sedentary, middle-aged women.
