Introduction

The world has throughout history experienced various leaders who have been and continue to hold different views and opinions as to how the States and governments are to be led. Political leaders are seen to be the drivers of governments and States; however, it is important to note here that society is not lead by only political leaders but rather leaders with different ideologies including social, economic, cultural, religious, geographical orientation. United States of America politics has changed the hands of many conservatives, democrats, and republicans and is now in the hands of the newly elected president Barrack Osama. However, it is important to note at this juncture that all has not been smooth and it is important to appreciate the country's heroes both dead and alive for the far they have brought this country and at the same time acknowledge that there will be more change in the future as power continues to change hands in days and years to come.

Discussion

America's third president Thomas Jefferson is among many others leaders that left a legacy in American history especially in constitution writing. Despite being far from the country at the time of constitution writing, Jefferson influenced political affairs while in France as the US minister for finance. He was involved in the development of the federal government through correspondence. His main concern with the establishment of federal governments was a federal government with limited powers. As with this ally John Locke, he believed that leaders should not overstep their boundaries. Even before he became the third president of the United States of America his contributions to the formation of the government including the definition of the power of the Constitution was considerable. He was responsible for writing the Declaration of Independence which saw the freeing of all American States from their colonizer; Britain thought he admitted that that contained no original ideas but was rather a statement shared by supporters of the American Revolution. He was also responsible for writing a preamble of the Constitution of Virginia and George Mason's draft of the Virginia Declaration of Rights.
