Board members are not to be confused with the board of directors. The board of directors is a formal body that represents the company's shareholders and is responsible for the company's overall strategy and performance. The board of directors is typically composed of a small number of individuals, often including representatives from the company's major shareholders and independent directors. The board of directors is responsible for making major decisions about the company's operations, including the appointment and removal of the CEO and other senior executives, the approval of the company's budget and financial statements, and the oversight of the company's risk management and compliance programs. The board of directors is also responsible for ensuring that the company is acting in the best interests of its shareholders and for monitoring the company's performance against its strategic goals.
