Generally speaking, mammals are recognized and classified by their external appearance. The external features which separate mammals into orders include: the number of digits (toes or fingers) on the feet, method of molting or skin transformation, and characteristics of the teeth.

Mammals have two unique, universal characteristics which distinguish them from all other vertebrates: (1) all mammals have hair at some time during their development, and (2) all female mammals possess mammary glands with internal openings for nourishing offspring with milk. Your fetal pig probably does not have a lot of hair due to the fact that it is not fully developed yet. However, at maturity most pigs do have hair.

The tips around the mouth are well developed and the upper lip has a groove called the philtrum. Humans also have a philtrum. Then the robust mandibular bone came and lost almost every other line.

The statistical analysis described here focused on the mean

Examine the ears. They have a flexible outer flap called the pinna. The pinna helps the pig hear by focusing the sound waves that reach the ear.
