2. Explain the relationship between the lymphatic system and the immune system.

The lymphatic system is a network of vessels and nodes that transport lymph, a fluid containing white blood cells, throughout the body. It plays a crucial role in the immune response by filtering out pathogens and debris from the blood and providing a site for immune cells to interact and mount a defense.

3. Describe the function of the thymus gland and the spleen in the immune response.

The thymus gland is a small, pear-shaped organ located in the upper chest area. It is responsible for the maturation and development of T-lymphocytes, which are essential for the adaptive immune response. The spleen, located in the upper left abdomen, filters blood for pathogens and debris, and it also stores and filters lymphocytes.
