Britons and their Battlefields Ian Atherton, 2024-08-19 While much attention has been paid to the commemoration of conflict in the twentieth century this book is the first to consider conflict memory in the long term arguing that modern practices were not created out of the mud of the trenches but evolved from much longer practices From the fourteenth century to the present day this work analyses the changing commemoration and memories of British battlefields at home and overseas from Bannockburn 1314 to Bosworth 1485 to Basra 2003 9 Across these seven centuries there has been a series of recurring post battle rituals that have shaped and continue to shape memories of conflict Three distinct but overlapping periods of memory can be delineated In the later Middle Ages battlefields were consecrated by the burial of the fallen and often by the erection of a battlefield cross or chapel or chantry to pray for the dead The second phase began with the Protestant Reformation in the 1530s when pilgrimage and prayers for the dead were abolished and battlefield chantries were dissolved and many battlefield crosses were demolished Memories shifted from the dead to the living especially the bodies of surviving veterans who commemorated the conflict by their wounds and from soil and stone to print and ink The third phase began in the eighteenth century when antiquaries and others established new monuments on past battlefields Monuments to survivors and the dead were established on contemporary battlefields such as Waterloo once again hailed as sacred ground hallowed by bloodshed fit destinations for a pilgrimage Not just officers but ordinary soldiers began to be memorialized by name on the battlefield culminating in the cult of the names of the dead enshrined by the creation of the War Graves Commission in 1917 and the idea that battlefields should be preserved unchanged as seen in modern heritage management Drawing on a wide variety of literary and historical sources and taking a uniquely longue dur e approach the book explores and links memory making practices from across the period to reconsider the ways in which battlefields are commemorated and re commemorated In so doing it makes a unique contribution to a wide range of historiographical fields British history since the fourteenth century memory studies heritage studies landscape history conflict archaeology and military history

The English Catalogue of Books ,1901 Modals and Periphrastics in English Paul Westney,2013-02-07 English has a number of periphrastic verbal forms that are semantically close to particular modal verbs and perform suppletive functions in relation to them eg have got to must and be able to can After an exploration of the syntactic semantic and phonological properties of potential periphrastic forms this study investigates the nature of the relationship between the modals must should will and can and various semantically close periphrastics using a spoken corpus of British English as the primary source of data The focus is on the pragmatic interpretation of the items being compared with some attention to their functions in discourse These items are notoriously idiosyncratic both syntactically and semantically but the general contrast claimed by some scholars between the maximally unmarked status of modals and the relatively marked status of periphrastics is amply confirmed and this together with the basic association of modality with alternative possible worlds is shown to be reflected in a number of different ways including the claimed objectivity of periphrastics and the tendency of some to be associated with actuality Level of formality is also found to be a significant though not uniform factor here English Patents of Inventions, Specifications ,1876
