

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food is broken down mechanically in the mouth or physically through a series of chemical reactions and enzymatic secretions, allowing nutrients to be absorbed. The digestive system also removes indigestible components that must be excreted as the waste of the gastrointestinal tract.

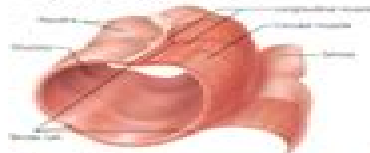

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, digested material enters the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, which is connected to the pancreas by the pancreatic duct. This duct is a branching system on the pancreas where the pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas enters the duodenum. The gallbladder stores bile secreted by the liver and releases it into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

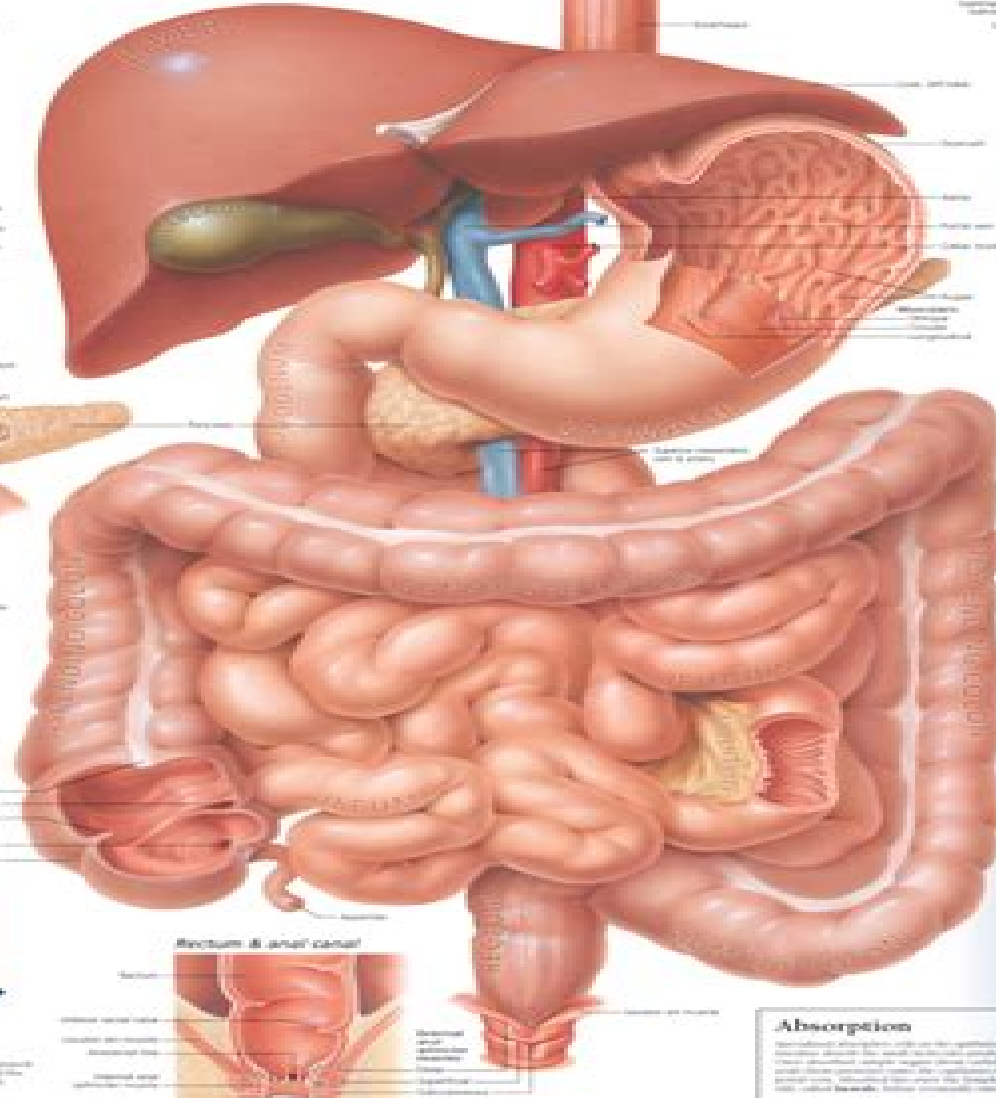

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the caecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, the sigmoid colon, and the rectum. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food and forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

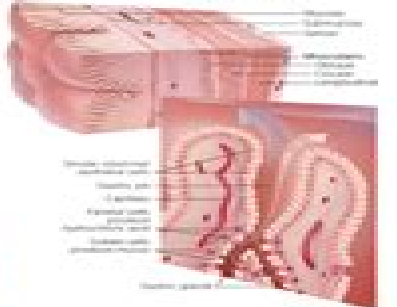

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. The salivary glands in the mouth secrete saliva, which contains the enzyme amylase that begins the breakdown of starches. Saliva also moistens the food, making it easier to swallow. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers: the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food. It is located in the lower right part of the abdomen. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food. The villi in the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream through the capillaries in the villi.
