

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the duodenum opens into the descending large intestine. The liver and pancreas are accessory organs that help in the digestion process.

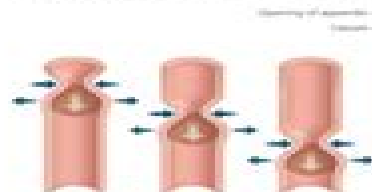

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food, forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

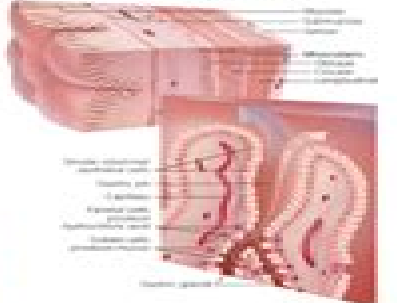

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Salivary glands secrete saliva, which is mixed with the food in the mouth. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands. Saliva contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the digestion of carbohydrates.

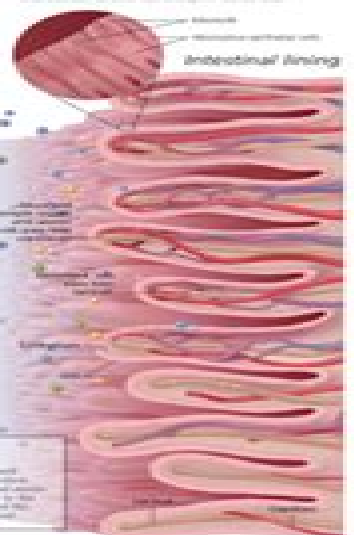

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the mechanical and chemical digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of the digestion and absorption of nutrients. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of the majority of the nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption.
