

Study Chapter: Blood

In your lab report, show how blood maintains homeostasis?

1. Describe how your blood maintains and sustains the underlying tissues of the organs

- 1. Plasma - the liquid part of blood that carries cells and nutrients. It is composed of water, proteins, and electrolytes.
- 2. Red blood cells - contain hemoglobin, which carries oxygen from the lungs to the rest of the body.
- 3. White blood cells - fight infections and help with the body's immune response.
- 4. Platelets - help with blood clotting to prevent excessive bleeding.

2. Describe what happens when the body's temperature is too high or too low and how blood helps maintain homeostasis.

When the body's temperature is too high, blood vessels dilate to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body. When the body's temperature is too low, blood vessels constrict to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

- 1. Dilation - blood vessels expand to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body.
- 2. Constriction - blood vessels narrow to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

When the body's temperature is too high, blood vessels dilate to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body. When the body's temperature is too low, blood vessels constrict to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

When the body's temperature is too high, blood vessels dilate to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body. When the body's temperature is too low, blood vessels constrict to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

When the body's temperature is too high, blood vessels dilate to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body. When the body's temperature is too low, blood vessels constrict to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

- 1. Thermoregulation - the process of maintaining the body's temperature within a narrow range.
- 2. Homeostasis - the body's ability to maintain a stable internal environment.

When the body's temperature is too high, blood vessels dilate to increase blood flow to the skin, which helps cool the body. When the body's temperature is too low, blood vessels constrict to reduce blood flow to the skin, which helps conserve heat.

3. Explain how blood maintains the body's pH balance.

Blood maintains the body's pH balance through the bicarbonate buffer system. This system involves the conversion of carbon dioxide and water into bicarbonate ions and hydrogen ions, which helps regulate the body's pH.
