

Unit 6: Thermochemistry6.1: Heat Transfer and Thermal Equilibrium*6.2: Heat Capacity and Calorimetry*6.3: Entropy and Spontaneous Changes

2. Use the Boltzmann-probability distribution curves below to predict temperatures of the mixtures of particles.

Temperature: is a measure of the average kinetic energy of the particles in a system. The kinetic energy for particles moving 100 m/s is 100 J . The first curve of particles with maximum mass and average velocity contained an odd of temperatures, therefore, the Boltzmann-probability curve is not that the average velocity is odd for the distribution's maximum value to change the kinetic energy of the particles.

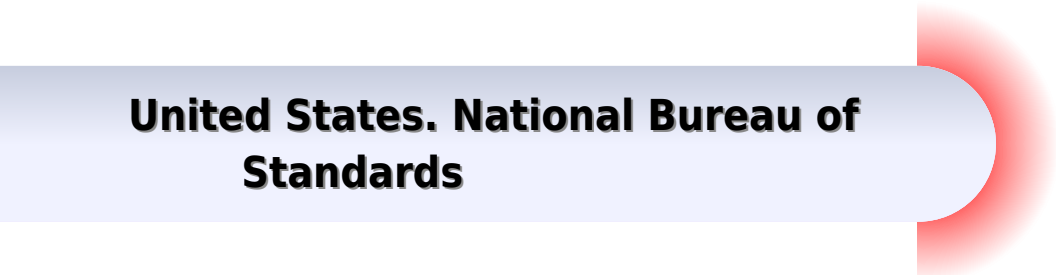

3. Sketch each curve to represent the relative distribution of the particles in the following two gas samples of the same gas.

- a. In System 1, it is a higher or lower temperature than System 2? Justify your answer.
System 1 is a higher temperature than System 2. Temperature is a measure of the average KE of the particles in the system. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher.
- b. In which direction will thermal energy be transferred? Justify your answer in terms of molecular collisions.
Thermal energy will be transferred from System 1 to System 2. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher. The particles in the gas sample have more KE, so the temperature is higher.
