

An equation is formed by equating two algebraic expressions. Solving an equation means finding the value of the variable that makes the equation true. The solution set of an equation is the set of all values of the variable that satisfy the equation.

Algebraic equations are classified according to the number of variables, the degree of the variables, and the form of the equation. The most common types of algebraic equations are linear equations, quadratic equations, and systems of equations. Linear equations are equations in which the highest power of the variable is 1. Quadratic equations are equations in which the highest power of the variable is 2. Systems of equations are equations in which there are two or more equations with the same variables. The solution set of a system of equations is the set of all values of the variables that satisfy all the equations in the system. The solution set of a linear equation is a line in the Cartesian plane. The solution set of a quadratic equation is a parabola in the Cartesian plane. The solution set of a system of linear equations is a point, a line, or no solution. The solution set of a system of quadratic equations is a point, a line, a parabola, or no solution.

Solving Linear Equations

The diagram shows a linear equation. The equation is $x + 2y = 6$. The graph of the equation is a line in the Cartesian plane. The line passes through the points $(0, 3)$ and $(6, 0)$. The solution set of the equation is the line.

$$x + 2y = 6$$

Solving Quadratic Equations

Quadratic equations are equations in which the highest power of the variable is 2. The most common types of quadratic equations are linear equations, quadratic equations, and systems of equations. Linear equations are equations in which the highest power of the variable is 1. Quadratic equations are equations in which the highest power of the variable is 2. Systems of equations are equations in which there are two or more equations with the same variables. The solution set of a system of equations is the set of all values of the variables that satisfy all the equations in the system. The solution set of a linear equation is a line in the Cartesian plane. The solution set of a quadratic equation is a parabola in the Cartesian plane. The solution set of a system of linear equations is a point, a line, or no solution. The solution set of a system of quadratic equations is a point, a line, a parabola, or no solution.

The solution set of a quadratic equation is a parabola in the Cartesian plane. The parabola opens up or down. The vertex of the parabola is the point where the parabola changes direction. The axis of symmetry of the parabola is the line that passes through the vertex and is perpendicular to the directrix. The directrix of the parabola is the line that is perpendicular to the axis of symmetry and passes through the focus. The focus of the parabola is the point where the parabola is closest to the directrix. The solution set of a system of linear equations is a point, a line, or no solution. The solution set of a system of quadratic equations is a point, a line, a parabola, or no solution.

The diagram shows a quadratic equation. The equation is $x^2 + 2x - 3 = 0$. The graph of the equation is a parabola in the Cartesian plane. The parabola opens up. The vertex of the parabola is the point $(-1, -4)$. The axis of symmetry of the parabola is the line $x = -1$. The directrix of the parabola is the line $y = -5$. The focus of the parabola is the point $(-1, -3)$. The solution set of the equation is the parabola.

The diagram shows a system of equations. The system consists of a linear equation and a quadratic equation. The linear equation is $x + 2y = 6$. The quadratic equation is $x^2 + 2x - 3 = 0$. The solution set of the system is the set of all values of the variables that satisfy both equations. The solution set of the system is the set of points $(0, 3)$ and $(6, 0)$.

Solving Systems of Equations

$$x + 2y = 6$$

$$x^2 + 2x - 3 = 0$$

$$x + 2y = 6$$

The diagram shows a system of equations. The system consists of a linear equation and a quadratic equation. The linear equation is $x + 2y = 6$. The quadratic equation is $x^2 + 2x - 3 = 0$.
