There are several reasons for getting your furnace inspected. First and foremost, it's your safety. A faulty furnace can be a fire hazard. It can also be a health hazard, as it can release carbon monoxide into your home. A professional inspection can help you identify any potential problems before they become serious. Second, a furnace inspection can help you save money. A well-maintained furnace will run more efficiently, which means you'll pay less on your energy bills. Finally, a furnace inspection can help you extend the life of your furnace. Regular maintenance can prevent wear and tear, so you won't have to replace your furnace as often.
