Theoharis, Mark A. Gooden, 2012-11-01 Challenges of work life balance in the academy stem from policies and practices which remain from the time when higher education was populated mostly by married White male faculty Those faculty were successful in their academic work because they depended upon the support of their wives to manage many of the not work aspects of their lives Imagine a tweedy middle aged white man coming home from the university to greet his wife and children and eat the dinner she s prepared for him and then disappearing into his study for the rest of the evening with his pipe to write and think great thoughts If that professor ever existed he is now emeritus Juggling Flaming Chainsaws is the first book in a new series with Information Age Publishing on these challenges of managing academic work and not work It uses the methodology of autoethnography to introduce the work life issues faced by scholars in educational leadership While the experiences of scholars in this volume are echoed across other fields in higher education educational leadership is unique because of its emphasis on preparing people for leadership roles within higher education and for preK 12 schools Authors include people at different places on their career and life course trajectory people who are partnered and single gay and straight with children and without caring for elders and managing illness They hail from different geographic areas of the nation different ethnic backgrounds and different types of institutions What all have in common is commitment to engaging with this topic to reflecting deeply upon their own experience and to sharing that experience with the rest of us The sets up the potential for exclusion based on the attainment ideals and on the modes of selection. Ideals of inclusion suggest diversity and those of equity by reference to impartiality suggest freedom from bias. Honors education which celebrates excellence and references honor and all that word and concept infers heightens and promotes the principled recognition of attainment giving rise to questions of diversity, equity and inclusion. The Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) in its Ten Steps to Equity in Education notes that inclusion is intertwined with fairness. How can honors education and in the case of the discussions in this book largely honors in US higher education promote fairness, be diverse and support equity? If it does not do so how can it at all claim to be offering a principled version of what the National Collegiate Honors Council (USA) says are opportunities for measurably broader, deeper and more complex learning centered and learner directed experiences for its students. In 2015 the National Society for Minorities in Honors (www.nsfmih.org) was launched in the USA to specifically explore support and promote diversity, equity and inclusion in and across honors colleges and programs. The first annual NSFMIH conference was held at Oakland University, Michigan. This book began at that inaugural conference and has been enhanced by enthusiastic contributions beyond that event as well. Forthcoming Books
