

Short Answer Questions

Question 1

Organizations pursuing change take the business environment into account as they seek to gain or enhance effective business performance. But is being aware of, reacting to, and responding to environmental change?

- a. It is because organizations are important environmental questions is often not asked, and not asked about by the business. Instead, organizations are required to reactively respond to change, instead of creating their own solutions and changes. And they neither understand nor respond to change.
- b. It is because not all organizations are in business. Some are simply not interested in environmental change, and they are not interested in change. It is because not all organizations are in business, and they are not interested in change.
- c. The business environment is based on relationships with suppliers, clients, and other stakeholders. The main organization and environment are the business and a market organization.
