Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be safe and enjoyable, and to be easily implemented in a community setting. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, followed by a 10-minute aerobic workout, a 10-minute resistance training session, and a 10-minute cool-down. The second session was a 10-minute aerobic workout, a 10-minute resistance training session, and a 10-minute cool-down. The third session was a 10-minute aerobic workout, a 10-minute resistance training session, and a 10-minute cool-down. The program was evaluated using a pre-test and post-test design. The results showed that the program had a positive effect on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of the participants. The authors concluded that the program was a safe and effective way to improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Althoff paints a picture of an entrepreneurial system rife with bias and discrimination where women receive less than 3 percent of this country's venture capital struggle to find mentors in the wake of MeToo and are dismissed as mompreneurs. The effects of this unequal system—a weaker economy, fewer jobs, less innovation—are felt by all of us, and Althoff explains how more equitable structures in business and entrepreneurship will benefit all people, not just those hoping to fund a startup. By exploring some of the practical ways we can open the entrepreneurial system to everyone, Althoff provides a rallying cry and a way forward for women entrepreneurs and their allies, showing that change is urgent and within our reach.
