8. Further reflection on Billings' argument is required. On the face, the argument appears straightforward but needs to be critically analysed. For a critical analysis, consider how the company's strategy (intended to earn a 10% increase in profit this year) differs from company objectives (financial success). What assumptions justify Billings' claim? Which aspects should further strategy development consider? What are the underlying assumptions? Will this result in success? How? Billings' claim is about 10% increase in profit. What are the underlying assumptions?
