

Getting curious, finding out: reading nonfiction at Level 4

Engaging in a book with a child can open up a world of wonder, excitement, rich discussions, and ongoing learning. Nonfiction books offer a unique structure for children to learn about topics of interest, to deepen their vocabulary, and to actively explore information through engaging with timelines, visual features, and maps. Use this guide with Level 4 books in the Super Readers series to foster curiosity and to explore together with children.

Before you read

Book selection Help the child find a book based on their interests. For instance, if they are curious about oceans and wildlife, point them to Shark Attack!

Ask the child questions about what they already know about the topic and other engaging questions. For example, “What have you already read about _____?”, “What else are you wondering about _____?”

Ask them to share what they notice about the front and back covers, title, and the table of contents. Ask, “What do you think the author’s main message will be in this book?” Ask, “Where might you find information about _____?” Ask them about topics that are related to the chapter titles so they can infer which chapter may include that information, instead of asking to find specific chapter titles.

Set purpose for reading Ask, “What do you want to learn as you read?” and “What are the most important things the author wants you to know?”

While you read

Have the child read the first page out loud. Encourage them to use the pronunciation guide to read unknown words. If they need more support, have them continue to read out loud. If they can read independently, encourage them to read in their head.
