

Enhancing Outcomes Experienced by Users of Upper Limb Prostheses

Several years ago, the Hanger Institute began collecting outcome measures from users with upper limb amputation and with receiving a limb with a prosthesis in their prosthetic rehabilitation. While well being and quality of life are primary measures of interest, additional measures include measures of pain, participation, upper extremity function, and user confidence. Addressing these has been a challenge for upper limb prostheses, and user confidence, which has not been reported on until patients using both conventional and prosthetic upper limb prostheses. Collectively, these efforts have allowed us to better understand important considerations within the population.

With more than 100 years of experience, Hanger is committed to providing the best possible outcomes for our users.

The use of upper limb prostheses has increased significantly over the past decade, with a steady increase in the number of users and the number of prostheses used.
