France International Monetary Fund. Monetary and Capital Markets Department,2019-10-28 This technical note presents risk analysis of banking and insurance sector in France The assessment is based on stress tests which simulate the health of banks insurers under severe yet plausible counterfactual adverse scenarios The stress tests reveal that banks and insurers would be resilient against simulated shocks although some challenges remain French banks have improved their capitalization and asset quality however profitability remains challenged The report also highlights that profitability is pressured on both the income and expense sides Banks ability to generate higher interest income is constrained by persistently low interest rates and market businesses including trading activities have contracted in recent years Growth at risk GaR analysis shows that the biggest contributing factors to the risk of growth are cost of funding and stock market prices Financial conditions continue to tighten gradually since mid 2017 though the overall conditions remain accommodative Risks stemming from loans to households seem to be contained over the short to medium term horizon given relatively strong households balance sheets no evidence of significant misalignment in house prices social safety nets and fixed interest rates
