W. Frazer, Kenneth Peter Lertzman, John Antonio Trofymow, Pacific Forestry Centre, 1997 Hemispherical canopy photography is an indirect method for measuring various components of forest canopy structure and solar radiation flux within and below forest canopies The method utilizes a 180 degree fisheye lens camera to capture and record the position size and shape of openings or gaps in a forest canopy During late summer 1995 eight sites on southern Vancouver Island were intensively sampled using hemispherical photographic methods This document describes the general theory approach and analytical tools associated with hemispherical canopy photography and computerized image analysis in the context of this research. As a result, a technical protocol has been devised that can be adopted, modified, and improved upon by those interested in using hemispherical techniques for similar research initiatives. Recommendations are made to improve the quality and reliability of future hemispherical image analysis systems. Appendices include information on measurement of fisheye lens distortion and the effect on the calculation of gap fraction magnitude and distribution and a model for estimating percent open sky and leaf area index.
