F. Fletcher,William Benjamin Mercier,1911 It is apparent that the business of distilling alcohol is one which calls for a considerable investment and no small degree of technical skill It can not be conducted advantageously from a commercial point of view in very small plants on account of the proportionately high cost of the plant and of the labor and many of the so called wastes which have been suggested as fermentable raw materials are so poor in fermentable substance or so expensive to handle that their availability is thereby impaired It seem that the business to be productive of satisfactory returns must be conducted on a fairly large scale and that the best success is likely to be attained with raw materials of the general types already in use namely maize potatoes and molasses The industry is not suited to every locality and it is most likely to be successful if carried on systematically on a very large farm or if supported by the joint interests of a fairly large community The alluring statements sometimes made regarding large financial returns to be obtained by making industrial alcohol with waste raw material unskilled labor and a cheap distilling outfit are misleading and can only result in loss if followed Conclusion p 32
