Agriculture is the main occupation of people in Nigeria, especially those in the rural areas. It plays a major role in the lives of the people. Agriculture provides employment. Many people depend on it to make a living. More than 65% of strong and healthy people in the country practice one type of agriculture or the other such as farming, fishing, poultry and keeping animals. Apart from fish, agriculture provides food for large population of the country. Everybody needs food whether one is a farmer, doctor, teacher, scientist or a preacher. Whatever profession one belongs to, one must eat, and food comes from agriculture. Food items supplied by agriculture include: yam, beans, plantain, guinea corn, beef, fish, chicken etc. Different industries produce the goods we use with materials gotten from agriculture. Textile industries use cotton to make clothes . Industries that produce tyres make use of rubber. Soap- making industries depend on palm oil while shoe-making industries rely on the skin they get from animals. Therefore, agriculture provides raw materials for industries. Furthermore, agriculture provides money for government . When farmers export crops like Cocoa, groundnuts and yams to other countries, they pay taxes to government. At times, big farmers and businessmen import agricultural materials like fishing nets, fertilizers, tractors, and drugs for treating fish, fowls, and other animals. Government collects taxes on all of these.
