2014 Tundra Running Boards:

Tusaayaksat - Winter 2015 Tusaayaksat Magazine, 2015-12-31 80 Years of Reindeer History Understanding Northern Latitude Vegetation Greening and Browning National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Life Sciences, Polar Research Board, 2019-04-18 Vegetation change has been observed across Arctic and boreal regions. Studies have often documented large scale greening trends but they have also identified areas of browning or shifts between greening and browning over varying spatial extents and time periods. At the same time though there are large portions of these ecosystems that have not exhibited measurable trends in greening or browning. These findings have fueled many questions about the drivers of vegetation dynamics, how trends are measured and potential implications of vegetation change at local to global scales. In December 2018 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine convened a workshop to discuss opportunities to improve understanding of greening and browning trends and drivers and the implications of these vegetation changes. The discussions included a close look at many of the methodological approaches used to evaluate greening and browning as well as exploration of newer technologies that may help advance the science. This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop. The Challenges of Long Term Ecological Research: A Historical Analysis Robert B. Waide, Sharon E. Kingsland, 2021-04-07 This volume explores the challenges of sustaining long term ecological research through a historical analysis of the Long Term Ecological Research Program created by the U S National Science Foundation in 1980. The book examines reasons for the creation of the Program, an overview of its 40 year history and in depth historical analysis of selected sites. Themes explored include the broader impact of this program on society including its relevance to environmental policy and understanding global climate change, the challenge of extending ecosystem ecology into urban environments and links to creative arts and humanities projects. A major theme is the evolution of a new type of network science involving comparative studies, innovation in information management, creation of socio ecological frameworks, development of governance structures and formation of an International Long Term Ecological Research Network with worldwide reach. The book's themes will interest historians, philosophers and social scientists interested in ecological and environmental sciences as well as researchers across many disciplines who are involved in long term ecological research. Stoat in the Dock Carolyn M. King, 2025-05-07 This book surveys the ecology of stoats resident in New Zealand since the 1880s when they were deliberately imported from UK as potential agents of biological control against rabbits. Our current understanding of them and of their impacts on the communities of native animals and birds with which they now live has developed over decades of research. Past knowledge is essential to inform future decisions on when, where and how to minimize damage from stoats in the future. New Zealand is one of the most significant known examples of the drastic impacts of invasive predators on endemic species and communities but its story is largely unfamiliar to international audiences. This is a detailed, academically rigorous and fully documented account of how introduced mustelids have made themselves at home in New Zealand written by a specialist stoat biologist as a single coherent story Each chapter includes a section explaining the context in which the most important details of the biology of stoats and to a lesser extent ferrets have been documented what techniques worked and what did not and why The book is written primarily for the well informed general public plus a cross disciplinary audience of academics senior undergraduates and postgraduates interested in the history of interactions between predators and native wildlife and professionals working on invasive species in New Zealand and elsewhere It will be of special interest to conservationists birdwatchers and naturalists Scientific American ,1887 A to Zoo Rebecca L. Goldsmith,Theo Heras,Susan Corapi,2016-08-11 Reading the World s Stories is volume 5 in the Bridges to Understanding series of annotated international youth literature bibliographies sponsored by the United States Board on Books for Young People USBBY is the United States chapter of the International Board on Books for Young People IBBY a Switzerland based nonprofit whose mission is bring books and children together

The series promotes sharing international children's books as a way to facilitate intercultural understanding and meet new literary voices. This volume follows Children's Books from Other Countries (1998), The World through Children's Books (2002), Crossing Boundaries with Children's Books (2006), and Bridges to Understanding: Envisioning the World through Children's Books (2011) and acts as a companion book to the earlier titles. Centered around the theme of the importance of stories, the guide is a resource for discovering more recent global books that fit many reading tastes and educational needs for readers aged 0–18 years. Essays by storyteller Anne Pellowski, author Beverley Naidoo, and academic Marianne Martens offer a variety of perspectives on international youth literature. This latest installment in the series covers books published from 2010–2014 and includes English language imports as well as translations of children's and young adult literature first published outside of the United States. These books are supplemented by a smaller number of culturally appropriate books from the US to help fill in gaps from underrepresented countries. The organization of the guide is geographic by region and country. All of the more than 800 entries are recommended, and many of the books have won awards or achieved other recognition in their home countries. Forty children's book experts wrote the annotations. The entries are indexed by author, translator, illustrator, title, and subject. Back matter also includes international book awards, important organizations, and research collections, and a selected directory of publishers known for publishing books from other countries.
