World War II, Film, and History John Whiteclay Chambers II, David Culbert, 1996-10-10 The immediacy and perceived truth of the visual image as well as film and television's ability to propel viewers back into the past place the genre of the historical film in a special category War films including antiwar films have established the prevailing public image of war in the twentieth century For American audiences the dominant image of trench warfare in World War I has been provided by feature films such as All Quiet on the Western Front and Paths of Glory The image of combat in the Second World War has been shaped by films like Sands of Iwo Jima and The Longest Day And despite claims for the alleged impact of widespread television coverage of the Vietnam War it is actually films such as Apocalypse Now and Platoon which have provided the most powerful images of what is seen as the reality of that much disputed conflict But to what degree does history written with lightning as Woodrow Wilson allegedly said represent the reality of the past To what extent is visual history an oversimplification or even a distortion of the past Exploring the relationship between moving images and the society and culture in which they were produced and received World War II Film and History addresses the power these images have had in determining our perception and memories of war Examining how the public memory of war in the twentieth century has often been created more by a manufactured past than a remembered one a leading group of historians discusses films dating from the early 1930s through the early 1990s created by filmmakers the world over from the United States and Germany to Japan and the former Soviet Union For example Freda Freiberg explains how the inter-racial melodramatic Japanese feature film China Nights in which a manly and protective Japanese naval officer falls in love with a beautiful young Chinese street waif and molds her into a cultured submissive wife

proved enormously popular with wartime Japanese and helped justify the invasion of China in the minds of many Japanese viewers Peter Paret assesses the historical accuracy of Kolberg as a depiction of an unsuccessful siege of that German city by a French Army in 1807 and explores how the film released by Hitler's regime in January 1945 explicitly called for civilian sacrifice and last ditch resistance Stephen Ambrose contrasts what we know about the historical reality of the Allied D Day landings in Normandy on June 6 1944 with the 1962 release of The Longest Day in which the major climactic moment in the film never happened at Normandy Alice Kessler Harris examines The Life and Times of Rosie the Riveter a 1982 film documentary about women defense workers on the American home front in World War II emphasizing the degree to which the documentary's engaging main characters and its message of the need for fair and equal treatment for women resonates with many contemporary viewers And Clement Alexander Price contrasts Men of Bronze William Miles's fine documentary about black American soldiers who fought in France in World War I with Liberators the controversial documentary by Miles and Nina Rosenblum which incorrectly claimed that African American troops liberated Holocaust survivors at Dachau in World War II In today's visually oriented world powerful images even images of images are circulated in an eternal cycle gaining increased acceptance through repetition History becomes an endless loop in which repeated images validate and reconfirm each other Based on archival materials many of which have become only recently available World War II Film and History offers an informative and a disturbing look at the complex relationship between national myths and filmic memory as well as the dangers of visual images being transformed into reality

The Hollywood Story Joel Waldo Finler, 2003 This fully revised and updated edition of an award winning classic traces the history of Hollywood from the silent era to the present day The Hollywood Story comprehensively covers every aspect of movie making in America taking in nickelodeans drive ins and multiplexes the transition from silent to sound black and white to color the relationships of producers directors stars and technicians and the function and output of the studios their major hits and most expensive flops
