The Andes Mountains

Read the following text and answer the questions below.

The Andes Mountains are a major mountain range in South America, stretching over 9,000 kilometers (5,600 miles) along the western coast of the continent. They are the longest mountain range on the continent and the second longest in the world, after the Himalayas.

The Andes Mountains are home to many different types of ecosystems, including tropical rainforests, dry forests, and high-altitude grasslands. They are also home to many different types of animals, including llamas, alpacas, and vicuñas.

The Andes Mountains are also home to many different types of people, including the Inca, Aztec, and Mayan civilizations. They are still home to many indigenous people today.

The Andes Mountains are a very important part of South America. They provide a natural barrier between the continent and the Pacific Ocean. They also provide a source of water for many of the continent's rivers.

The Andes Mountains are a very beautiful part of South America. They are home to many different types of landscapes, including snow-capped peaks, glaciers, and colorful valleys.
