Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of dental caries between children who had been exposed to fluoride varnish and those who had not. The study was conducted in a community-based setting in a low-income urban area. A total of 100 children aged 6-12 years were included in the study. The results showed that the prevalence of dental caries was significantly lower in the group that received fluoride varnish compared to the control group.
