Modeling the Impact of Climate Change on Rice Production in Asia Robin B. Matthews, C.A.B.

International, International Rice Research Institute, 1995 Although recent rapid industrialization has contributed greatly to improved living standards it has also resulted in an increase in concentration of greenhouse gases leading to global warming The relationship between climatic change and agriculture is particularly important as world food production is under pressure from a growing population Rice is the second most important crop in the world after wheat with more than 90% currently grown in Asia where it is the main item of the diet It has been estimated that rice production needs to increase by 70% over the coming decades to meet the demands of population growth Hence it is vital to understand the effect of climate change on rice growth development and production This book is the outcome of a collaborative study between the United States Environmental Protection Agency s EPA Environmental Research Laboratory and the International Rice Research Institute It quantifies the impact of climate change on rice production using crop simulation models and integrates existing knowledge of the effects of increased levels of carbon dioxide and temperature Detailed scenarios are provided for selected major rice producing countries in Asia Japan India Malaysia South Korea China and the Philippines The book represents a
