

Short Answers for Class 11 Accountancy Chapter 2 – Theory Base of Accounting

1. Why is it necessary for accountants to assume that a business entity will remain a going concern?

It is necessary for accountants to consider that a business entity will remain a going concern, as an asset will be calculated for the profit it earns, along with the depreciation it is charged, both of which are not restricted only for one accounting period. Hence, it indicates continuity in business.

2. When should revenue be recognised? Are there exceptions to the general rule?

Revenue is recognised if the right to receive income is established. It can also be said to have been established when a sale takes place in cash or in credit.

The following exceptions can be seen:

1. Goods that are sold on hire purchase, the amount thus collected in instalments will be accounted as revenue realised.
2. Projects related to the construction of buildings, etc., are projects of long duration; revenue is realised periodically that is in proportion to the part of work which is completed.

3. What is the basic accounting equation?

The assets of a business are equal to the claims of its owners and creditors, as per the basic accounting equation. Liabilities are known as Creditor's Equity, and Capital is known as Owner's Equity. It is represented as

$\text{Assets} = \text{Capital} + \text{Liabilities}$

4. The realisation concept determines when goods sent on credit to customers are to be included in the sales figure for the purpose of computing the profit or loss for the accounting period. Which of the following trends is to be used in practice to determine when to include a transaction in the sales figure for the period? When the goods have been:

- a. dispatched b. invoiced

Comprehensive Accountancy XI S. A. Siddiqui, A. S. Siddiqui, 2011-05

House of Commons - Committee of Public Accounts: Universal Credit: Early Progress - HC 619 Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts, 2013-11-07 Universal Credit is the DWP's single biggest programme and enjoys cross party support yet its implementation has been extraordinarily poor. The failure to develop a comprehensive plan has led to extensive delay and the waste of a yet to be determined amount of public money. 425 million has been spent so far on the programme. It is likely that much of this including at least 140 million worth of IT assets will now have to be written off. Lack of day to day control meant early warning signs were missed with senior managers becoming aware of problems only through ad hoc reviews. Pressure to deliver a programme of this magnitude within such an ambitious timescale created a fortress culture where only good news was reported and problems were denied. There has been a shocking absence of control over suppliers with the Department failing to implement the most basic procedures for monitoring and authorising expenditure. The pilot programme is not a proper pilot. Its scope is limited and does not deal with the key issues that Universal Credit must address: the volume of claims, their complexity, change in claimants' circumstances and the need for claimants to meet conditions for continuing entitlement to benefit. The programme will not hit its current target of enrolling 184 000 claimants by April 2014. The Department will have to speed up the later stages of the programme if it is to meet the 2017 completion date but that will pose new risks. Meeting any specific timetable from now on is less important than delivering the programme successfully.
