

CHAPTER 1

Accounting in Action

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

1. Yes, this is correct. Virtually every organization and person in our society uses accounting information. Businesses, investors, creditors, government agencies, and not-for-profit organizations must use accounting information to operate effectively.
2. Accounting is the process of identifying, recording, and communicating the economic events of an organization to interested users of the information. The first step of the accounting process is therefore to identify economic events that are relevant to a particular business. Once identified and measured, the events are recorded to provide a history of the financial activities of the organization. Recording consists of keeping a chronological diary of these measured events in an orderly and systematic manner. The information is communicated through the preparation and distribution of accounting reports, the most common of which are called financial statements. A vital element in the communication process is the accountant's ability and responsibility to analyze and interpret the reported information.
3. (a) Internal users are those who plan, organize, and run the business and therefore are officers and other decision makers.
(b) To assist management, accounting provides internal reports. Examples include financial comparisons of operating alternatives, projections of income from new sales campaigns, and forecasts of cash needs for the next year.
4. (a) Investors (owners) use accounting information to make decisions to buy, hold, or sell shares.
(b) Creditors use accounting information to evaluate the risks of granting credit or lending money.
5. No, this is incorrect. Bookkeeping usually involves only the recording of economic events and therefore is just one part of the entire accounting process. Accounting, on the other hand, involves the entire process of identifying, recording, and communicating economic events.
6. Jackie Summers Travel Agency should report the land at £25,000 on its December 31, 2020 statement of financial position. This is true not only at the time the land is purchased, but also over the time the land

Micellar Solutions and Microemulsions Sow Hsin Chen, Raj Rajagopalan, 2012-12-06 During the last decade there has been a renewed interest in research on supramolecular assemblies in solutions such as micelles and microemulsions not only because of their extensive applications in industries dealing with catalysts detergency biotechnology and enhanced oil recovery but also due to the development of new and more powerful experimental and theoretical tools for probing the microscopic behavior of these systems Prominent among the array of the newly available experimental techniques are photon correlation spectroscopy small angle neutron and X ray scattering and neutron spin echo and nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopies On the theoretical side the traditionally emphasized thermodynamic approach to the study of the phase behavior of self assembled systems in solutions is gradually being replaced by statistical mechanical studies of semi micro scopic and microscopic models of the assemblies Since the statistical mechanical approach demands as its starting point the microscopic structural information of the self assembled system the experimental determination of the structures of micelles and microemulsions becomes of paramount interest In this regard the scattering techniques mentioned above have played an important role in recent years and will continue to do so in the future In applying the scattering techniques to the supramolecular species in solution one cannot often regard the solution to be ideal This is because the inter aggregate interaction is often long ranged since it is coulombic in nature and the interparticle correlations are thus appreciable
