

ANCIENT EGYPT ALONG THE NILE

Ancient Egyptians created a civilization along the banks of the Nile river which lasted for thousands of years. Starting with primitive tribes, the Egyptians advanced and thrived because of their location and their connection to the Nile River. Dry barren desert lay to east and west. In between, the Nile overflowed every year. Thick silt created a rich soil, supporting agriculture.

The Nile provided food and transportation in ancient Egypt. Because of the rich soil, many crops were planted and harvested. People fished, hunted wildlife, and raised animals. Papyrus, a plant that grows along river edges, was used to make a paper-like material. The Egyptians wrote in picture-like hieroglyphs on papyrus.

Boats of many kinds moved along the Nile, carrying local people as well as the treasures of Pharaohs. From further south by boat came huge stones and precious minerals, like gold and gemstones. Simple light barges and small boats were made of river-grown reeds. Larger boats for heavier tasks, like transporting large stones, were built of rare wood that came from the Middle East.

The Egyptians hoped that everything in this life would be experienced in a next life. This belief in the afterlife made them preserve their dead pharaohs as mummies. Detailed art decorated tombs. Ancient Egyptians erected amazing architecture, like pyramids and obelisks, using natural rock and stone. Even today, anthropologists are not sure how they created these complex structures.

Today we can visit these sites and wonder about the amazing culture, art, religion and architecture that developed along the River Nile.
