EUROPEAN POWERS INVADE THE PACIFIC RIM (Pages 362–363)

Which Western powers grabbed land in Southeast Asia?

European nations also grabbed land in the Pacific Rim, Southeast Asia and the islands on the edge of the Pacific Ocean. The lands of Southeast Asia were perfect for plantation agriculture. Sugar, coffee, cocoa, rubber, coconuts, bananas, and pineapples were important products.

The Dutch controlled Indonesia. Many of the Dutch who moved to Indonesia thought of Indonesia as their home. They set up a class system that kept the Dutch at the top. Wealthy and educated Indonesians came next. Plantation workers were at the bottom. The Dutch forced farmers to use one-fifth of their land for export crops.

The British took the port of Singapore plus Malaysia and Burma (modern Myanmar). They used Singapore as a base for trade. It became one of the world's busiest ports. The British encouraged the Chinese to move to Malaysia. The Malaysians have become a minority in their own country. Tension between the Malays and the Chinese remains to this day.

France grabbed Indochina (modern Laos, Cambodia, and Vietnam). The French ruled Indochina directly and tried to push French culture on the Indochinese. The French did not encourage industry. Rice became a major crop. Although the Vietnamese grew more rice than before, they ate less of it because so much rice was sent out of the region. This problem set the stage for Vietnamese resistance to French rule.

Colonialism brought some features of modern life to these regions. But economic change benefited Europeans more than the local people. Even so, schooling, health, and sanitation were improved. Millions of people migrated to new regions of Southeast Asia. But the mix of cultures did not always go smoothly. Even today, some conflict between groups results from this period.

(Re)Negotiating East and Southeast Asia Alice D. Ba, 2009-03-26 This book seeks to explain two core paradoxes associated with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations ASEAN How have diverse states hung together and stabilized relations in the face of competing interests divergent preferences and arguably weak cooperation How has a group of lesser self identified Southeast Asian powers gone beyond its original regional purview to shape the form and content of Asian Pacific and East Asian regionalisms According to Alice Ba the answers lie in ASEAN's founding arguments arguments that were premised on an assumed regional disunity She demonstrates how these arguments draw critical causal connections that make Southeast Asian regionalism a necessary response to problems give rise to its defining informality and consensus seeking process and also constrain ASEAN's regionalism Tracing debates about ASEAN's intra and extra regional relations over four decades she argues for a process driven view of cooperation sheds light on intervening processes of argument and debate and highlights interacting material ideational and social forces in the construction of regions and regionalisms
