Infant Perception and Cognition Lisa M. Oakes,2011 The cognitive revolution in the 1950s and 1960s led researchers to view the human mind like a computer as an information processing system that encodes represents and stores information and is constrained by limits on hardware the brain and software learning strategies and rules The emergence of new behavioral computational and neuroscience methodologies has deeply expanded psychologists understanding of the workings of the infant child and adult mind One result is that research has focused on mechanisms of change over developmental time in the information processing mind In this book Lisa Oakes Cara Cashon Marianella Casasola and David Rakison bring together the recent findings and theories about the origins and early development of the information processing mind and provide insight into the future directions in the study of infant perception and cognition The contributors represent a wide range of research areas in the study of infant perception and cognition who emphasize the use of diverse methodological techniques to address key questions about development Their chapters demonstrate how the combination of historical perspectives on the information processing approach to cognition and recent advances in behavioral computational and neuroscience approaches to cognition has contributed to our understanding of how abilities ranging from visual attention to face processing to object categorization have developed during infancy Across this broad range of topics it is clear that much of our modern understanding of infant perceptual and cognitive development emerges from the foundation of classic information processing models of development such as that of Leslie B Cohen 1991 The recent advances illustrated in this book show how researchers have built on this foundation to uncover the mechanisms that drive developmental change

Social Connectionism Frank Van Overwalle,2013-03-07 Many of our thoughts and decisions occur without us being conscious of them taking place connectionism attempts to reveal the internal hidden dynamics that drive the thoughts and actions of both individuals and groups Connectionist modeling is a radically innovative approach to theorising in psychology and more recently in the field of social psychology The connectionist perspective interprets human cognition as a dynamic and adaptive system that learns from its own direct experiences or through indirect communication from others Social Connectionism offers an overview of the most recent theoretical developments of connectionist models in social psychology The volume is divided into four sections beginning with an introduction and overview of social connectionism This is followed by chapters on causal attribution person and group impression formation and attitudes Each chapter is followed by simulation exercises that can be carried out using the FIT simulation program these guided exercises allow the reader to reproduce published results Social Connectionism will be invaluable to graduate students and researchers primarily in the field of social psychology but also in cognitive psychology and connectionist modeling Categorization by Humans and Machines, 1993-10-22 The objective of the series has always been to provide a forum in which leading contributors to an area can write about significant bodies of research in which they are involved The operating procedure has been to invite contributions from interesting active investigators and then allow them essentially free rein to present their perspectives on important research problems The result of such invitations over the past two decades has been collections of papers which consist of thoughtful integrations providing an overview of a particular scientific problem The series has an excellent tradition of high quality papers and is widely read by researchers in cognitive and experimental psychology Proceedings of the Fourteenth Annual Conference of the Cognitive Science Society Cognitive Science Society (US) Conference, 2014-05-12 This volume features the complete text of all regular papers posters and summaries of symposia presented at the 14th annual meeting of the Cognitive Science Society What can simple brains teach us about how vision works Davide Zoccolan, David D. Cox, Andrea Benucci, R. Clay Reid, 2015-11-18 Vision is the process of extracting behaviorally relevant information from patterns of light that fall on retina as the eyes sample the outside world Traditionally nonhuman primates macaque monkeys in particular have been viewed by many as the animal model of choice for investigating the neuronal substrates of visual processing not only because their visual systems closely mirror our own but also because it is often assumed that simpler brains lack advanced visual processing machinery However this narrow view of visual neuroscience ignores the fact that vision is widely distributed throughout the animal kingdom enabling a wide repertoire of complex behaviors in species from insects to birds fish and mammals Recent years have seen a resurgence of interest in alternative animal models for vision research especially rodents This resurgence is partly due to the availability of increasingly powerful experimental approaches e g optogenetics and two photon imaging that are challenging to apply to their full potential in primates Meanwhile even more phylogenetically distant species such as birds fish and insects have long been workhorse animal models for gaining insight into the core computations underlying visual processing In many cases these animal models are valuable precisely because their visual systems are simpler than the primate visual system Simpler systems are often easier to understand and studying a diversity of neuronal systems that achieve similar functions can focus attention on those computational principles that are universal and essential This Research Topic provides a survey of the state of the art in the use of animal models of visual functions that are alternative to macaques It includes original research methods articles reviews and opinions that exploit a variety of animal models including rodents birds fishes and insects as well as small New World monkey the marmoset to investigate visual function The experimental approaches covered by these studies range from psychophysics and electrophysiology to histology and genetics testifying to the richness and depth of visual neuroscience in non macaque species
