Clinical Management of Shock Stanislaw P. Stawicki, Mamta Swaroop, 2020-06-24 Shock is a physiological state of war From a healthcare provider perspective the word shock is associated with a mixed array of feelings including dread well founded fear and deep respect The physiological state of shock is well recognized for the associated destructive consequences and its successful management requires prompt identification immediate action and sustained effort by all members of the healthcare team This mindset of advanced preparation and constant readiness constitutes the foundation of the modern approach toward shock early detection and prompt treatment for optimal outcomes Despite the heterogeneity of shock as a clinico pathological entity there are some common threads that permeate all forms and manifestations of shock with apparent increase in observed commonalities in the more advanced and often irreversible stages of the systemic syndrome When faced with shock the body and its systems do their best to compensate for the maldistribution of oxygen and nutrients This is known as the so called compensated shock Beyond that the body loses its ability to adjust any further thus descending into uncompensated shock with a refractory state characterized by vasoplegia and irreversible cardiovascular failure As the reader journeys through the chapters of the book he or she will read about various biomarkers and endpoints of resuscitation explore different types of shock e g septic hemorrhagic anaphylactic and learn about some of the less often discussed topics such as neurogenic and spinal shock as well as the amniotic fluid embolism Our goals were to keep things clinically relevant and practically oriented thus enabling the reader to apply the newly acquired knowledge in their everyday clinical routines As the reader progresses through the book we hope to help stimulate further discourse and innovative thinking about the topic In this context it is critical that basic translational and clinical research on shock continues to advance Only through ongoing scientific progress can we help improve outcomes for patients with both rare and common forms of shock

Symptomatology in Psychiatric Illnesses Manuel Morrens, Sebastian Walther, 2015-12-10 Psychomotor symptoms are those symptoms that are characterized by deficits in the initiation execution and monitoring of movements such as psychomotor slowing catatonia neurological soft signs NSS reduction in motor activity or extrapyramidal symptoms EPS These symptoms have not always received the attention they deserve although they can be observed in a wide range of psychiatric illnesses including mood disorders psychotic disorders anxiety disorders pervasive developmental disorders and personality disorders Nevertheless these symptoms seem to have prognostic value on clinical and functional outcome in several pathologies In the late 19th century the founding fathers of modern psychiatry including Kahlbaum Wernicke Kraepelin and Bleuler had a strong focus on psychomotor abnormalities in their description and definitions of psychiatric illnesses and systematically recognized these as core features of several psychiatric pathologies Nevertheless emphasis on these symptoms has reduced substantially since the emergence of psychopharmacology given the association between antipsychotics or antidepressants and medication induced motor deficits This has resulted in the general idea that most if not all psychomotor deficits were merely side effects of their treatment rather than intrinsic features of the illness Yet the last two decades a renewed interest in these deficits can be observed and has yielded an exponential growth of research into these psychomotor symptoms in several psychiatric illnesses This recent evolution is also reflected in the increased appreciation of these symptoms in the DSM 5 As a result of this increased focus new insights into the clinical and demographical presentation the etiology the course the prognostic value as well as treatment aspects of psychomotor symptomatology in different illnesses has emerged Still many new questions arise from these findings This research topic is comprised of all types of contributions original research reviews and opinion piece with a focus on psychomotor symptomatology in a psychiatric illness especially research focusing on one or more of the following topics the clinical presentation of the psychomotor syndrome the course through the illness the diagnostical specificity of the syndrome the underlying neurobiological or neuropsychological processes new assessment techniques pharmacological or non pharmacological treatment strategies
