The Death and Life of Gentrification Japonica Brown-Saracino, 2026-01-13 A provocative account of what is gained and what is lost when a word that once narrowly referred to neighborhood change takes on a life all its own Sociologist Ruth Glass coined the term gentrification in the 1960s to mark the displacement of working class residents in London neighborhoods by the professional classes The Death and Life of Gentrification traces how the word has far outgrown Glass's meaning becoming a socially charged metaphor for cultural appropriation upscaling and the loss of authenticity In this lively and insightful book Japonica Brown Saracino traces how a concept originally intended to describe the brick and mortar transformation of neighborhoods has come to characterize transformations that have little to do with cities She describes how journalists artists filmmakers novelists and academics use gentrification as a symbolic device to mourn how everyday pleasures and forms of self expression from music to marijuana kale and tattoos entered the domain of the elite She weighs the implications of turning to gentrification as a tool to tell stories entertain audiences and communicate political messages Relying on vivid examples the book reveals how the term today expresses widespread ambivalence about rising economic inequality and unease with a variety of forms of social change This pathbreaking book forces us to think about whether the wide ranging way we use gentrification dilutes its meaning and stymies efforts to identify and resist urban displacement Drawing on everything from film and television to novels and art The Death and Life of Gentrification sheds critical light on the changing meaning of gentrification in contemporary life The book is a must read for anyone interested in gentrification and urban dynamics as well as for readers curious about attitudes about growing income inequality and the evolution and circulation of ideas

Meaningful Pasts Russell Johnston, Michael Ripmeester, 2024-01-31

In Meaningful Pasts Russell Johnston and Michael Ripmeester explore two strands of identity making among residents of the Niagara region in Ontario Canada First they describe the region's official narratives most of which celebrate the achievements of white settlers with a mix of storytelling rituals and monuments Despite their presence in local lore and landmarks these official narratives did not resonate with the nearly one thousand residents who participated in five surveys conducted over eleven years Instead participants drew on contemporary people places and events Second the authors explore the emergence of Niagara's wine industry as a heritage narrative The book shares how the survey participants embraced the industry as a local identifier and indicates how the industry's efforts have rekindled the residents' interest in agriculture as a significant element of regional heritage and local identities Revealing how the profiles of local narratives and commemorations become entwined with social cultural economic and political power Meaningful Pasts illuminates the fact that local narratives retain their relevance only if residents find them meaningful in their day to day lives
