Read the passage below and answer the questions from 46 to 50 :

When Herodotus of Halicarnassus first set eyes on the pyramids, 2,700 years ago, he was a cultural tourist. His comments regarding the graffiti on the monuments and the levy of guides available for hire indicates that he was far from the first tourist to visit these monuments and try to gain some understanding about the people who built them. For much of written history, what is now considered tourism was related to human kind's insatiable curiosity. The desire to travel to learn about other people and their culture has always been an essential motivator. Hunziker and Krapf expressed this well when they pointed out, "There is no tourism without culture" (World Tourism Organisation 1995:6). It was only with the arrival of mass tourism, a scene 150 years ago, that tourism took on its modern hedonistic and less enlightened complexion.
