

8.4 – Surface Areas and Volumes of Similar Solids

Let's explore the ratio of two polygons with a scale factor of $\frac{a}{b}$. Complete the following table.

Ratio of Sides	Ratio of Perimeters	Ratio of Areas	Ratio of Volumes	Ratio of Surface Areas
$\frac{a}{b}$

Surface Areas and Volumes

Similar solids have corresponding dimensions representing measurements are proportional.

For example, if you have a cube that is 10 cm on each side, the ratio of this cube's length measurement to 1 is the same as the ratio of its surface area to the surface area of a cube that is 1 cm on each side.

If the ratio of the corresponding dimensions of similar solids is a constant, then the ratio of their surface areas is the square of the constant, and the ratio of their volumes is the cube of the constant.

Example 1: Surface Area

- Two similar rectangular prisms have a scale factor of 3. The ratio of their surface areas is the square of the scale factor.
 - Two similar rectangular prisms have a scale factor of 3. The ratio of their volumes is the cube of the scale factor.
- $$\text{SA} = \frac{a^2}{b^2} \quad \text{V} = \frac{a^3}{b^3}$$

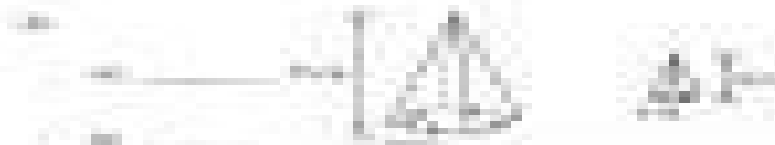

Example 2: Volume

- Two similar rectangular prisms have a scale factor of 3. The ratio of their surface areas is the square of the scale factor.
 - Two similar rectangular prisms have a scale factor of 3. The ratio of their volumes is the cube of the scale factor.
- $$\text{SA} = \frac{a^2}{b^2} \quad \text{V} = \frac{a^3}{b^3}$$

Are your results the same? How do you explain the difference? Or are you the same? Why?

Explain all figures in detail. Use the given measurements to find the ratio of their surface areas and the ratio of their volumes.
