We'll also tell you which parts of the books you can ignore. This edition of GRE All the Verbal has been reorganized to start from the basics: words in this case, and build to more complex sentences, paragraphs, and passages. You'll learn how to build your vocabulary in an organic way that allows you to use these words in grad school and at work, not just to regurgitate the words for the test. You'll also learn how to deconstruct complex sentences, a skill crucial not just for Text Completion and Sentence Equivalence (aka vocabulary problems) but also for Reading Comprehension passages. And finally, you'll learn how to parse complicated meaning across multi-sentence blocks of text, a skill you'll need for Reading Comprehension and for multi-blank Text Completions. You'll also learn how to spot and avoid common traps, and you'll have plenty of practice problems with detailed answer explanations, all of which have been constructed by our 99th percentile GRE instructors. Finally, you'll learn how to use all of these skills to tackle the AWA Analytical Writing Assessment portion of the exam, also known as the essays.

Making Arguments Edmond H. Weiss, Steven M. Weiss, 2012-04-24 Making Arguments: Reason in Context offers a new approach to the teaching of argumentation and debate. Nearly all argumentation courses and textbooks tilt toward one of two extremes: Critical thinking/informal logic, in which the laws of reasoning are universal and not affected by audience or context; Public speaking, in which adaptation to the audience and winning assent trumps logic and reasoning. At the first extreme are texts that stress flaws in arguments and how to discern them Their focus tends to be on the logic making deductive inferences and avoiding deductive mistakes or other errors of inference and or the recognition of fallacies deficient or fake arguments They also deal with the messy ambiguities of language Generally this approach omits the concept of an audience And it does not explain how spotting the flaws in reasoning or improving one's reasoning translates into the ability to make an effective argument Further it is not clear how to address audiences whose grasp of logic is shaky At the other extreme are books especially public speaking textbooks that err in the opposite direction They are fixated on audience As a result their advice about how to argue is grounded in audience adaptation In fact the process of reasoning is nearly subordinated to such secondary considerations as style delivery and organization And again the connection between critical thinking logic and audience is rarely examined In Making Arguments we propose to consider argument at the nexus of invention and judgment the two endpoints from which logic and public speaking examine argumentation respectively By looking at the stuff that comes between an argument's design and its delivery we hope to enrich the understanding and the study of argument as both a theoretical and applied discipline In particular we want to answer some questions that are seldom addressed in print What is the starting point for argumentation When do we even need to argue When should one embrace and when should one avoid arguing Why does the same argument work in one place and fail in another Are most audiences capable of understanding a complex argument With what authority can one make an argument absent expertise in the field in which the argument takes place Are there substantive differences between oral and written argument What does it mean to present an argument Can someone control the argumentative situation context to the benefit of his/her position How can argument educate and improve the arguer Can we learn the truth by arguing This book addresses the whole advocacy process as a series of concatenated intellectual decisions affecting how arguments are created ordered rendered and produced with judgment as the overarching concern
